e-Governance

A blend of innovation and technology
for Governance Systems

Objective

The basic aim of e-Governance solutions is to incorporate simple, moral, accountable, responsive and transparent governance. The e-Governance should incorporate processes and structures that harness the potentialities of information and communication technologies at various levels. For us, the objective is to incorporate the three main components of e-Governance viz. information, active participation of community and community consultation in our processes.

Benefits

Through our customizable e-Governance solutions, we try to:

- relate the concept of governance to that of sustainable human development,
- justify it by enhancing the capacity of public administration to increase the supply of public value,
- imply the use of ICT channels to change the way communities and business interact with government, and
- enable communities' involvement in decision making, facilitate increased access to information, bring in more transparency, and deliver a strengthening society.

Through our e-Governance solutions we try to bring national, regional, and local administration closer to the communities and the people. Government service delivery not often reach to the community/organization members, and there is less focus on how the people will be engaged and make decision in the process. Our e-Governance solutions and service model try to widen the scope of administration's interactions with people and make them reach to what can help them best.
